The Alzheimer’s Disease Assistance Center is part of the Pearl I. Barlow Center for Memory Evaluation and Treatment at New York University Langone Medical Center.
What is an ADAC?

The Alzheimer’s Disease Assistance Center (ADAC) is funded by the New York Department of Health. There are nine ADACs located across New York State, which offer specialized care in the diagnosis and treatment of Alzheimer’s disease and related dementias. The NYU ADAC is an all-inclusive resource to the community and health care providers.

The NYU ADAC is led by Thomas Wisniewski, MD, an expert in the diagnosis, treatment, and management of cognitive disorders. Dr. Wisniewski is assisted by a multidisciplinary team of clinicians. Patients are seen at the Pearl I. Barlow Center for Memory Evaluation and Treatment.

Our Goals:

- To provide expert diagnosis and treatment to patients with Alzheimer’s disease or related dementias
- To address all aspects of memory care for patients and their families
- To provide dementia education to patients, families, the community, and health care providers

The ADAC accepts Medicare.

ADAC Services

We provide expert clinical evaluations for patients with memory, mood, and behavioral disorders and focus on early diagnosis, treatment, and counseling using a collaborative care model.

Our collaborative care model means that all members of the healthcare team work together to provide state-of-the-art services leading to improved patient and family outcomes. It is well suited to meet all aspects of patient care needs.

Patients and families meet with all members of the care team at the initial evaluation including the nurse practitioner, psychometrician, and social worker.

The initial visit includes a detailed interview of the patient and family, a physical and neurological exam, a falls risk evaluation, a social needs assessment, and pencil-and-paper testing of memory and thinking.

Following your evaluation, you may be referred to other health providers at the Barlow Center such as a licensed clinical social worker for individual, couples, or group psychotherapy.
