Asian American Health Series

CSAAH’s and the NYU-CUNY PRC’s Asian American Health Seminar Series will provide students interested in health careers an increased awareness about health issues affecting Asian American populations, gaps in health status indicators, and barriers to both care delivery and research for these populations. The seminars also aim to provide an understanding of culturally and linguistically appropriate approaches to research, outreach, and community partnership in Asian American populations, as well as an overview of qualitative and quantitative research skills.

The goals of these seminars are in line with CSAAH’s Training Core Goals of:

1. Establishing an environment that will promote an increased representation of Asian Americans in conducting and participating in community-based research

2. Increasing interest and competency in community-based participatory research in Asian American health disparities and community health

3. Increasing the number of potential investigators from Asian American and economically disadvantaged groups to conduct research in Asian American health disparities
