Fall 2014

This course will consist of the ongoing presentation of one or more psychoanalytic cases, including seeing the patient(s) in consultation, setting up of the initial agreements about the treatment, with an eye toward understanding the ongoing analytic work from the vantage point of the vicissitudes of the transference, the continued work of resistance interpretation, as well as other aspects of the analytic experience. Questions about the case(s), discussions of technique, and disagreements between the candidates will be welcomed and will add to the value of this course.

There are no readings for this course.
